

Atlas Spine Announces FDA Clearance of its HiJAK Expandable Lateral Lumbar Interbody Fusion System

JUPITER, FL, December 10, 2024 — Atlas Spine, Inc., a spinal implant company based in Jupiter Florida, announced today they have received 510(k) clearance from the FDA for the HiJAK Expandable Lateral Lumbar Interbody System.

Atlas is answering the evolving market needs of lateral fusion procedures with the introduction of HiJAK LLIF. Leveraging their clinically proven expandable technology, HiJAK LLIF is the latest addition to Atlas' growing expandable interbody device portfolio.

Designed with both integrated fixation and without, and options which gain up to 30 degrees of angulation, the system provides surgeons the opportunity to adjust the implant intra-operatively, to "tailor fit" each patient's specific needs. The systems capabilities significantly aid in achieving optimal segmental lordosis and restoring the spine to its natural balance.

"Atlas is on an aggressive development pathway toward broadening its expandable technology platform, and this addition is an important step forward for our growth. The clinical success we have experienced since introducing the market's first true expandable cervical interbody gives us great confidence as we continue to introduce our future expandable product lines." says Atlas' CEO/CTO, Matt Baynham.

About Atlas Spine, Inc.

Atlas Spine Inc. creates, manufactures, and markets minimally invasive implants and instrument systems for the treatment of various pathologies of the spine. Atlas has established a reputation as an innovator in the spine implant industry and has served as a trusted design resource for spine surgeons and some of the largest players in the medical device industry. Their mission is to develop and market the most innovative, cost-effective, high quality, and clinically efficacious systems available. By working closely with some of today's top spine surgeons, Atlas is developing disruptive technology and forging the future of spine care.

Atlas Spine is currently welcoming inquiries for distribution of its growing product portfolio and hospital affiliations. For more information, please contact us at (561) 741-1180 or Sales@atlasspine.com.